

2022 GRANT ANNOUNCEMENT - DOCTORATE STUDENTS

2 grants

Attendance on the course “Facilitating Leadership in a Knowledge-based Society”

(IAP-UAM-DRCLAS)

OBJECTIVE

Through its School of Doctoral Studies, Universidad Autónoma de Madrid has announced a call for applications for two (2) grants by PhD students at Universidad Autónoma de Madrid who wish to attend the program “Facilitating Leadership in a Knowledge-Based Society” organized by the International Academic Program (IAP), which operates with the DavidRockefeller Center for Latin American Studies (DRCLAS), assigned 5 ECTS by the School of Doctoral Studies at UAM (EDUAM).

The need for future doctorate degree holders to acquire certain soft skills to allow them to successfully and meaningfully confront different scenarios in their working lives is becoming increasingly more obvious, and this will help them head up different activities in a quickly changing world. The objective of this course is to help the participating PhD students to develop some of those soft skills, including effective communication, teamwork, innovation and critical thinking or the ability to resolve interpersonal conflicts and crisis situations, just to name some. In this sense, the course is aligned with UNESCO’s Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) #4, on quality education (<https://es.unesco.org/sdgs>).

PLACE

The symposium is scheduled as a personal attendance event in a lecture room on the Harvard University Campus (29 Oxford Street, Harvard University Campus, Cambridge, MA 02138).
